CYNIC PHILOSOPHY.
Kneut must be contagious. It always makes other people tired.

Praise an actress to the skies and she naturally thinks she is a star.

When a woman's age begins to tell on her she can't very well shut it up.

If the truth were known, it is often the under dog that begins the fight.

Most of us get what we deserve, but few of us have the grace to recognize it.

No man likes to be roasted, but after all it is no more uncomfortable than to be kept in hot water.

Every man should be able to recognize his duty. He would then be in a better position to dodge it.

It is possible to take most things apart to see how they are made, but a man's fortune is an exception.

There isn't much difference between marrying a man to reform him and trying to make an omelet out of a bad egg.

When a fellow gets married there's a fee for the minister, another for the organist, and sometimes there's the devil to pay.

Not Delicate,

"I ran across an old acquaintance the other day."

"Certainly, so in your stomach?"

TWO TO ONE.

"I do like you," I belatedly said—
She was not eight years old.
And I just twelve, when, thus belatedly,
My first love tale was told.
For cupid (what that said?)
Had struck and left a scar,
And was my first sweetheart—
Made one!

When, older grown, I told my love
How dear she was to me,
The maid, more beautiful still, said:
"Nay."
But gently as could be,
My heart sank, fast I grew,
My hand from hers withdrew,
My face was then, I know,
Made woe.

Not, nothing haunted, I resolved
Once more my suit to press,
And then—time—ah, those rose-red cheeks!
She softly whispered "Yes."
I cupped like a boy,
For she, wisely now,
At last was in my joy,
Made woe!

And so, when springtime comes again
To scatter winter's gloom,
When daisies peek the beds with white
And crocuses 'tis to bloom,
To cheer we'll go with glee
And kindness, for you see,
We two intend to be Made woe!

HAD ACCIDENT OF THE OLD BOB.

And Irishman Thought Color Was Due to the Hot Sun.

It is said to be a peculiarity of the island of Montserrat that the negroes speak in a rich Irish brogue. This phenomenon is explained by the fact that in the seventeenth century the colony was peopled almost entirely by the Irish. In "The Grange of the Deep" Sir Frederick Trevelyan gives the following incident illustrative of the care with which this dialect has been preserved. It is quoted from Ober.

An Irishman fresh from Donegal arrives at Montserrat, and leaning over the steamer's rail, addresses himself in the following terms to a coal-black negro who has come alongside with provisions:

"Say, Cuffee, phwat's the chance for a lad ashore?"

"Good, yer honor, if ye're not afraid of wurruk. But me name's not Cuffee, an' please ye, it's Pat Mulvaney."

"Mulvaney? And do ye mane to say ye're Orlah?"

"O' do."

"The saints defend us! An' how long have ye been out here?"

"A matter of tin year or so."

"Tin year! An' yer black as me hat! Save me soul, I took yer for a nigger!"—Youth's Companion.

FINDS HIS OCCUPATION GONE.

Rag Man's Business Has Dwindled to Vanishing Point.

"Rags, bones, old iron!" is a cry not nearly so familiar to the children of to-day as to those of the '80's. For the ragman, like the chimney sweep and the sun dial maker, is becoming extinct. His used to be a profitable trade. The woolen rags he bought, turned into shoddy, brought thrice their cost. So did the bones, which were ground up for fertilizer. So did the iron, which, melted, fired again. Many millionaire manufacturing families had their beginning in a long-headed ragman. He first ground his rags into shoddy. Then he spun the shoddy into thread. Then, a full-fledged millman, he wove the thread into cloth. But the municipalities of to-day contract with single firms for the disposal of their people's refuse, and the old ragman is disappearing because there is so little for him. For—and this is the great secret—while the ragman made a grand profit on what he bought, it really on the refuse given him that he really thrives.

Where Noise Is Salable.
"You know, of course," said a watch factory foreman, "how Lynn captured the African shoe trade—making shoes that squeaked loudly. The native considers the discomfort and expense of American shoes quite futile if they don't squeak as he walks, like an ill-greased cart wheel. We have now hogged the African cheap watch trade by turning out a good dollar watch that ticks like a boiler factory. You could hear this tick through a feather mattress. In fact, natives wearing our watches tick audibly. As they swagger along, their American shoes squeaking and their American watches ticking, they give out as much noise as a brass band."

By Certain Mouth.
There is a certain youth who recently became engaged to a very sweet young girl, who, for all her sweetness, is well supplied with spirit. This youth evidently thought he had the entire game neatly printed in a book, and determined to head off the usual "Am I the only girl?" etc., queries, for, taking her in his arms, he said, gently but firmly:
"Now, sweetheart, I might as well tell you at the start—you are not the only girl I have ever kissed."
"Well, maybe not," she retorted, "but you still have much to learn about it!"—Harper's Weekly.

The Loving Cup.
The origin of the loving cup is to be found in Tartary. "On festive occasions," says Emerson, "it is the practice of the Tartars to gather at some predetermined spot where kumiss, by the hundreds of skins, is brought and placed in the open air. The men and women sit in a circle, and one of their number is selected as cup-bearer. The young women sing their national hymns and songs; no one rises, and the cup passes from hand to hand until all the beverage is consumed." Distilled kumiss is far stronger than brandy.

Emolument of Physicians.
Remuneration of physicians originally consisted in presents, but at the time of Hippocrates payment in money was already customary. Physicians received also public praise, the "crown of honor," the freedom of the city, the privilege of eating at the king's table. Physicians employed by the state received a yearly salary, as high as $1,000 in some instances. Rich people would pay enormous sums for a successful treatment, and a case is recorded in which $200,000 was paid.

When England Shook.
In the course of its long history England has known a few serious earthquake shocks. In the days of William Rufus one was felt throughout the country, and in 1382 an English earthquake destroyed Clontarf among its other damage, while part of St. Paul's cathedral fell in as the result of an earthquake in the sixteenth century. Perhaps the most recent serious shock was that which laid waste to the eastern counties in 1804. The London house and was named for the earthquake.

MONDAY THE 22. SPECIAL THEATRE TRAIN FROM RUMFORD.

Cohan and Harris Minstrels, featuring George Evans, the original "Honkey Boy" will appear at the Empire Theatre, Lewiston, March 22. Train will leave Rumford at 5:35 p. m.

The theatrical firm of Cohan & Harris have been recognized the past several years as among America's foremost producers of high class attractions. Therefore, no little interest has been manifested over their latest venture, minstrel stage an organization so mammoth in its proportions as to cause wonder among the most blasé of theatre-goers. Never since the birth of minstrelsy has a company been formed consisting of such a splendid array of talent as announced by Cohan & Harris.

The musical features will consist of several ballads sung by such famous soloists as Frank Merrill, Earl J. Benham, and Matt Keefe. There will be a chorus of half a hundred voices, and a symphony orchestra.

THE ISLAND AT RUMFORD ONCE UNDER SIX FEET OF WATER.

It may surprise some residents of the village of Rumford Falls to know that in 1899 there was a fall freshet that caused the Androscoggin to so far overflow its banks that from four to six feet of water stood on the Island. Mr. Samuel F. Wing, of Peru, called at the Citizen office in Rumford last Saturday and related the circumstance, which he witnessed. He says at other times he saw the Island overflowed, but never to the depth above mentioned. That was known as the "pumpkin freshet." It did great damage along the river.

There is some talk going the rounds that as the upper dam was weakened last summer by the building of the penstock that it may not be strong enough to hold it a flood like those of former times should result from the spring thaw, and some apprehension is expressed that the Island may again be submerged.

We are informed that the engineers employed on the work have left the dam in a safe condition. Mr. James Swan, a dam expert of Lewiston, pronounced it perfectly safe. Even if it should break, we doubt if enough water would flow on to the Island to do any damage.

We have been informed by Rumford Corner residents, that the occasion for the great depth of water on the Island in the freshet of 1899 was a great log jam at Knapp's pitch, just above where the foot bridge crosses the river. Now or residents speak of this place as Knapp's Falls, but old time Rumfordians call it the "pitch."

DOES NO HARM, BUT MUCH GOOD.

Recipe Easily Prepared, and Many Swear By It.

Many of Our Citizens Speak Well of the Home Prescription.

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime.
Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce;
Compound Sarsaparilla, three ounces.
A local druggist is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from our home druggist.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive kidneys, overcoming backache, bladder weakness and urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

A Hand-Made Reminder.
"The ladies of the times of chivalry had a great advantage over us," sighed the pretty little girl, as two royal suitors unfortunately met by a blunder on her part, on the same night.

"What was that?" queried her cousin.

"Because when they gave their gloves as favors, it helped them to remember which fellows they had engaged."—Billings' Magazine.

Heart Thrilling Gems.

Destined to provoke a smile, coax a tear, cause a tug at the heart strings, cast a gleam of light into the darkest corners, and bring a thrill of joy into each life which they touch.

On page 10 of this issue will be found a new department which we have opened this week, and which for the time being we will call

HEART THRILLING GEMS.

It is our purpose to publish in this department from week to week some of the

VERY CHOICEST PRODUCTIONS IN PROSE AND VERSE, HUMOR, ANECDOTES, ETC., which it is possible for us to obtain

With the assistance of our readers in procuring the choice material which we seek, we hope to be able to make this the one interesting feature of the paper.

The one Department to which many will turn first, and from which many a scrap book will be made to prove of lasting value to their owners.

Different selections, expressing different sentiments, appeal to different people. Were we to do all of the selecting there would be a tendency to get those things which appeal to us, and many of our readers might get but little from them that would interest and help. It is, therefore, our desire that ALL OF OUR READERS AND FRIENDS ASSIST IN MAKING THESE SELECTIONS. We are, therefore, going to make it an object for all to join us in bringing about the success which we anticipate for this column and to this end we are offering

SIX PRIZES.

To the person who will send us the best collection of choice selections, which shall be acceptable for this department, during the year 1909, we will give ten dollars in cash.

To the person sending the next best collection we will give a five year subscription to the Citizen.

To the person who sends the next best collection we will give a four year subscription and to the next a three year subscription; to the next a two year subscription and to the next a one year subscription.

The person who wins the five year subscription may take a one year subscription for five years, five single subscriptions or any division which they may choose to make. The same will apply to the four, three and two year subscriptions.

These selections may be sent in at the convenience of the sender, and will be booked and credited and considered as a list, when the awards are made, which will be in the latter part of the year 1909.

The value of these lists will be determined by three competent judges who will be named later. We desire that all well sent selections are they have at once, and all will please bear in mind that with the selections must be sent the name of the sender, the name of the author when known, and also if possible when and where the selection has been published.

If Selections are copied from scrap books or other sources, do not forget to furnish the above information and be careful to copy plainly and correctly.

ANOTHER PRIZE.

For the time being we have selected the name HEART THRILLING GEMS. This we shall use until a better one is found, and in the finding we again call upon our readers to assist us.

We are, therefore, asking our readers to picture in their minds this department as it is to appear with its rare and glittering gems, and suggest an appropriate name.

The different names which are suggested will be submitted to three judges, who will select from them the one to be adopted. To the person suggesting the name which seems most fitting and which is selected by the judges we will give ten dollars in cash.

PLEASE EXTEND THIS NOTICE TO YOUR FRIENDS.

If you have not kept a scrap book yourself, you may know of some one who has for years made a practice of clipping choice selections from their reading. Kindly call their attention to this offer and by sending their material they may not only win the prize which is offered, but will extend the influence of the selections which have helped them, into many a home to help many another. Should various selections which any one would desire to submit be contained in a scrap book they may, in order to avoid copying them, send their scrap book to us, and the same will be preserved carefully and returned after the selections are used.

THE BEST REMEDY

[illegible]

FROM THE SIGHT-SEER'S NOTE BOOK.

The Sightseer was not there, but there were those whose memory for things past and gone is good, and that is why the scribe has two ends of a very interesting story. The first part he was knowing to personally.

Last Monday, several good citizens of Rumford were called to South Paris to appear before the grand jury. At once they gathered at the Andrews House, and while waiting for the gong to sound, in walked a well known veterinary surgeon, with the unmistakable air of a man who owned—not the earth—but the fastest horse on the road. After the greetings were over someone said "Doc how did you get over?"

"Oh, I came with team to Bryant's Pond, and down on the same train with you fellows."

"Well, that's funny," said Wallace Stevens, "when we drove over I saw you on the street in front of the hotel, and I thought we were starting very late."

"I drove over with that little mare of mine in an hour and a half," was the reply. "The distance is eighteen miles—There were knowing glances passed between the Rumford men present and one of them said, 'How can that be Doc? I understood the mare was unable to make over eight miles an hour on Congress street, in speedy going.'"

"The Doc was relieved of the necessity of explaining, for the gong sounded, and all gave attention to the dining room, for the sound of the gong drowned out all other sounds as well as thoughts. (Come to think of it the gong at the Andrews House went out of commission years ago, but it was necessary to have something occur to let the Doc out of an embarrassing situation.)

The reader will pardon the Sightseer's sympathy for the great veterinary, for said G. V. had dug a hole for himself, and fallen in all out of sight, bravely speaking; although corporally he was lowering in confusion, six feet-two above the earth.

The above is scene two, and unlike stories made to order, had to come fast in the narrative.

Scene one occurred some weeks since in the municipal court room in Rumford. The judge sat in the chair of justice and Chief of Police Gilpatrick surrounded by several citizens that he had summoned as witnesses, were gazing with various expressions on their faces, at a certain veterinary surgeon and his friend Pete, who had been called into court to answer to the charge of speeding on Congress street.

Gilpatrick gave in his testimony that the Doc was racing up and down the thoroughfare at the rate of 15 miles an hour. There was some other testimony very sure that he was not driving to the same effect. The Doc himself tall as fast, for as it was brought out in the evidence, the little mare could not make over eight miles an hour. In fact if the Doc had wanted to sell the mare on the testimony given in at the hearing by his witnesses, she wouldn't have sold for much more than her carcase would bring for phosphate.

In fact it seemed absurd on the evidence to accuse the Doc of trying to get any speed out of her, for he is a big hearted and never was known to use dumb animals.

The fact that it was the same mare that took him over to Bryant's Pond in an hour and a half, two or three weeks later, has no bearing upon the case, excepting to prove that the Doc has a most wonderful faculty for "extraneousness" generally speed in horse.

RHEUMATISM CANNOT BE CURED UNLESS URIC-O IS USED.

Sudden Deaths, Heart Failure and Paralysis Are Caused By Poisonous Uric and Rheumatic Acids.

The Rheumatic person is skeptical regarding the claims of almost any remedy advertised as a cure for Rheumatism and one can scarcely blame him for being so. All the plasters and liniments combined never actually cured a case of Rheumatism. They may relieve it in one quarter but it is sure to break out somewhere else. The only true way to cure Rheumatism is to drive it from the system, for as long as the Uric and Rheumatic Acid remains in the blood, one is never entirely free from the trouble. Uric-O seeks out the Rheumatic poison in the blood, muscles and kidneys, renders it inert and harmless and drives it out of their system. It is composed of perfect antidotes for the rheumatic acid poison in the system, and the secret of its wonderful success lies in the fact that it is designed to cure Rheumatism only.

STABLE VENTILATION.

Best Methods of Getting Fresh Air to the Stock.

Undoubtedly the King system of ventilation is the most perfect, but in some cases it may prove too elaborate or expensive. Mr. V. E. Fuller's "diffusion system" is recommended strongly in the Practical Dairyman. This is on the order of the muslin front of the poultry house—and that certainly has become the order of the day in the poultry world. Mr. Fuller says: A proper amount of light and muslin to each cow is three square feet of the former and two square feet of the latter. The best muslin is "4/4" muslin—that is, 4 1/4 yards to the pound. A heavy muslin has not sufficient meshes and does not answer the purpose as well as the one recommended. If there are enough windows in the barn, the best plan is to take out the lower sash of every window or every other one, according to the number, and in place of the removed sash, tack on the muslin. This is best done by taking it on a frame which just fits the window, or it may be tacked at the sides, bottom and top of the window and cleats put on to make it firm. Utilize the windows on the south side, by preference.

We must bear in mind that we cannot afford to sacrifice the light for the ventilation; and that any window that has the muslin sheet is not so light as where it is all glass. If there are not enough windows in the barn to justify using half of each for the muslin, and it is a wooden barn, cut holes through the side walls of the requisite dimensions and tack on the muslin. Bear in mind that, whatever you do in providing this ventilation, you must have three square feet of glass and two square feet of muslin per cow. If your barn is a bank barn and you have no other means of getting ventilation, cut the holes in the ceiling and tack on your muslin. Of course you will not want it to run up into your hay. A great many barns are ventilated by taking the air near the ceiling up into the hay loft and distributing it through a chute into the hay mow, thereby very often saturating the hay with noxious gases. If the cows are suffering from some contagious disease, such as tuberculosis or abortion, the germs are carried into and lodge on the hay fed to farm animals. The muslin window system will not cost more than from two to three cents per cow. I have seen a great many barns ventilated in this way, and the results are astonishing. I have seen it beneficially used even where the King system was installed, in parts of the barn where it was damp. I have seen it in stables in the depth of winter where the thermometer went 40 degrees below zero, and yet water did not freeze in the barn. It makes the barn dry, maintains an even temperature, keeps the air sweet, removes noxious gases and is a great aid to the health of the cow.

If your windows are built with two sashes in one casing (d) and it is necessary to open either the upper or lower sash to get more air into the barn, you will find that it often causes a direct draught on the cows. A better plan is to hinge the upper sash (a) so that it will fall inward from the top. Have fasteners at each side of the upper window frame a triangular piece of board (b) with a cleat on the edge against which the sash can rest when open. This should be about nine inches across the space marked (c). This allows the air to come in at (e) and pass over the cows.

A FEEDING METHOD.

How a Canadian Dairyman Gets Good Results.

A Canadian dairyman who marketed 37,410 pounds of milk testing 8.5 percent, from a herd of but 12 Holstein cows last year, tells of his feeding method thus:

In the morning the first thing we do is to milk the cows; then the roots and meal are fed, after which the straw or hay. The water is always before them. At noon we give them a feed of cut corn, in the evening, say five or half-pint, we again milk, and the roots and meal are again fed followed by straw or hay. This diet is continued until about the first of March, when hay is fed in place of straw. The meal consists usually of a mixture of barley and oats.

When necessary to supplement this some bran is added, together with something stronger, such as low grade flour or ground wheat, which brings the mixture to about the same weight as the barley and oats. The milking cows receive of this about a gallon each, twice a day. I find that even yet my cows are not fed to their full capacity, as when given a feed of meal at noon it makes a considerable increase in the amount of milk.

Keep Cows Comfortable. Keep the cows comfortable at night and when the weather is cold and wet. In daytime, if they have pasture and good water, they can care for themselves.

HEART THRILLING GEMS.

DESTINED TO PROVOKE A SMILE, COAX A TEAR, CAUSE A TUG AT THE HEARTSTRINGS, CAST A GLEAM OF LIGHT INTO THE DARKEST CORNERS AND BRING A THRILL OF JOY INTO EVERY LIFE WHICH THEY TOUCH.

RECOMPENSE.

We are quite sure
That he will give them back—
Bright, pure and beautiful—
We know he will not keep
Our own and his until we fall asleep.
We know that he does not mean
To break the strands reaching between The Here and There.

He does not mean—through heaven he Takes—
To change the spirit's entering there,
That they forget
The eyes opened and wept,
The lips still for prayer,
The mute despair.

He will not take
The spirit which he gave, and make
The glorified as new
That they are lost to me and you.

I do believe
They will receive
His grace and mercy and be glad
To meet us, that when meet I would Grieve and

I feel begin to think about that glad
New,
When they shall tell us all about
The way

That they have learned to go—
Heaven's pathways show.

My last, my own, and I Shall have so much to see together
By and by.

I do believe that just the same sweet
Face,
That glorified, is waiting in the Place

Where we shall meet, if only I Am counted worthy in that by and
By.

I do believe that God will give a sweet
Answer
To unsatisfied, unfulfilled eyes,
And that this life heaven will be Most glad, most glad through with Joy for you and me,
As we have suffered and.

God never made Spent for spirit, answering shade for Shade,
And placed them side by side—
No thought in me, though separate,
Cognized—

And meant to break
The governing thread between
When we shall wake,
I am quite sure, we shall be very Glad

That for a life while we were so sad.

the bed and around the room,
In the corner of a lifetime they're the very death of June.

FORGET-ME-NOT.

When God in Eden the flowers named,
And colored them each and all,
One they blossomed held back ashamed
No shy she was and small.
Fair buds and bells in beauty came
A countless multitude!

And each was given a lovely name,
And each was given a name,
And a little flower hidden there
Saw wonders manifold.

For the rose received her reinment,
The lily her crown of gold;
Still she hid her wistful face
Half shy and half afraid.

Nor guessed that God a special place
And name for her had made!
All done at last, with sudden fears—
"Deemest herself forgot—"

She ventured forth and sighed
In tears, dear Lord forget me not!
Each lovely flower turned amazed
To hear those accents mild;

Then on the face of God they gazed
The while He looked and smiled,
He named the flower "Forget-Me-Not."

A HONG OF GIEER.

(By Sarah D. Hobart.)
Oh winter's wind that huffs me,
Helmsless from the northern sea,
You cannot desert my soul,
My heart thrills high against your tough.

Although you touch me overmuch—
I swim your harsh control.
For all the while a merry song—
"You bring the blessed spring along!"

Is swelling on the air.
I see the snow drifts break and fly;
There's laughter in the southern sky
And promise everywhere.

And though the dark woods cast their gloom
I know the violets will bloom.

Oh storms of fate that compass me,
That hush and will not let me be,
You, too, shall pass and fade,
I yield not to your cruel thrall.

For I, I hear the love birds call
A message glad and sweet.
The founts of joy forever flow
To glad the world of care and we.

"The cure is to receive."
I claim and hold my royal share
Of good that pulses everywhere
My heart to receive.

I am a part of smiles life
And love shall conquer pain and strife.

AN OLD NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL- HOUSE.

Between the dark old forest and the dusty country road,
Where the weary, plowing horses toiled
The farmer's heavy load.

Where—around the moss-grown tree-trunks—the woodchuck gently dinged,
And the birds' sweet joyous carol
through the solemn stillness ringed.

There, with the rocks for foundation
and the bright blue sky above,
Stood the sturdy old brick school house whose memory we all love.

It is like an open history of our past—its childhood days;
It speaks the early customs, and the quiet old-fashioned ways.

There, upon those very rocks, our grandparents came to play,
When grandpa was a lad and grand ma a pink-cheeked maid.

There, with jack-knife and red rosin,
with many a daisy seed,
Grandpa, his own name and his sweet heart's, had carved upon the wall.

And now within the twilight when the shadows gently play,
The children come the dear old school house to that day.

And Grandpa, laughing gaily at the old repeated play,
Takes up the eager youngsters upon his twinkling knee.

And taking them all the stories any one could wish to know, How he and Grandma went to school
on many years ago.

And Grandma by the window, while an easy chair
Smiles calmly at his stories and watches his every hair.

And her mind, too, wanders backward
to the time when she, a maid,
With that dark old forest and open space that once played.

For of all the pleasant memories there no more clearer in her mind,
Than the sturdy old brick schoolhouse
with the stars from behind.

DROVE FATHER'S PET

CHEERING REMINISCENCE OF BOYHOOD DAYS.

Story That Lifted Gloom from the Brows of Overburdened Business Men—Retrospection as a Cure for the Blues.

Ever stop to think of your boyhood days?

Nothing like it to drive away the blues.

The other day a group of business men, whose cares are not the lightest,
were seated about a restaurant table,
grabbing a hurried lunch. Every man, of them was grouchy. Just then the door opened, and another, just as busy,
as far as results go, but never acting as though he had a care on earth, came in.

He sat down and everyone turned with a half-smile.

They were feeling blue, and did not want anyone to convince them that some of it was imaginary.

"Did I ever tell you about the time I raced the old man's driving mare against time?" asked the cheery individual.

No one spoke.

"Well, I did," he said. "The old man and the mother had gone away on a visit. Dad had a mare which he was proud of, and no one touched it. Used to watch the hired man when he hitched her up, like a hawk. Well, on the day that they went away, I got restless. I had a pony, but it wasn't fast enough. So what did I do but get that mare out and put her into a sulky."

The other men were listening now.

"Put her into a sulky when the hired man was away, and down I goes to a stretch of road near the railroad track.
Say, but I hit up a pace, hanging onto the lines for dear life.

"When I got home I had half the boys in the neighborhood running across the fields to meet me, and we put her in the barn. I got busy and wiped her off, and the hired man never troubled.

"Next day, by agreement, I got her out, and half the town, the boy part of it, was there. I drove her down the stretch the proudest mortal in the universe, and the other boys looking on.

"Next day was Saturday. The folks were coming home Wednesday and I was getting down fine as a driver, and the mare was falling off a little in flesh, but the hired man wasn't wise.

"Saturday who should come around but the son of a man down the pike who had another driving mare. Father and he had always quarreled about the mare, but beyond going down the road side by side, each one seeing that he wasn't beat, they never came together.
Result was that kid and I matched the horse for a race on Tuesday.

"I went home and rubbed that mare down, going over her legs like regular jockers and wipers do, and never said a word to the hired man. On Monday I took the mare out for the last warmup up heat, and all the boys in town were there. The other kid was afraid to take out his horse except for the race.

"We went down to the head of the stretch, and as I turned to go along came that railroad train. The mare went down the road, scared, and I was perched upon the seat hanging on. A wire fence on the side of the road kept the mare from bolting.

"It looked like a spill for me, but I hung on like grim death.

"Near the place where the road turned away from the track it ran close and as we neared that I turned toward the car, expecting to crash
into the end of the train."

He stopped.

Every man sat up.

"How did you ever get out of the hospital, if you went into the train?"
asked one.

"I didn't," said the cheery one. "But say, dad and mother were riding in the last coach and looking right at me!"

"Tanned your hide, I reckon," said
a quiet listener.

"Well, did he?" said the cheery one.
"But he made me drive that race. Said he wouldn't afford to have the other man think he would allow his boy to be bluffed."

"And I won by a neck."

"The party broke up."

Every man of them was smiling and things looked brighter. Like the sun had come from out under a cloud.

Unappreciated Sympathy.

The soda fountain clerk was engaged in vigorously shaking up a chocolate and egg, says a writer in the Baltimore, when suddenly the glass broke in his hands, and the ensuing damage made him look like a human cannon. The horrified customer looked over the counter and tried to be sympathetic. Not knowing exactly what to say, he finally blurted out, conso-
latingly:

"Excuse him! Did the glass break?"

Blipping from head to foot, the clerk looked at him witherly.

"Did the glass break?" he repeated.
"And the glass broke?" And then with frustrated passion, "Oh, no, not at all!
You just happened to stop in while I was taking my morning shower."

Yankee Complacency.

Someone told to Hiram.

"I have been taking some morning shower of life on your farm."

WIT AND WISDOM.

A Hand-Made Reminder.

"The ladies of the times of chivalry had a great advantage over us," sighed the pretty little girl, as two civil suitors unfortunately met by a blunder on her part, on the same night.

"What was that?" queried her chum.

"Because when they gave their gloves as favors, it helped them to remember which fellows they had on hand."—Baltimore American.

A Religious Author's Statement.

Rev. Joseph H. Fegelman, Salisbury, N. C., who is the author of several books, writes: "For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to my bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day

gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Polley's Kidney Remedy."

Mistaken Advice.

The amiable clerk behind the desk
held out his hand with the conventional smile.

"Glad to see you," he ran on.
"Hope you will feel at home."

"Heaven! I hope not," protested the guest. "What do you suppose I came to the Great White Way for anyway?"—N. Y. Herald.

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR LA GRIFFE.

La grippe coughs are dangerous as they frequently develop into pneumonia. Polley's Honey and Tar not only stops the cough but heals and strengthens the lungs so that no serious results need be feared. The genuine Polley's Honey and Tar contains no harmful drugs and is in a yellow package. Refuse substitutes. W. E.

You needn't be afraid.

One day a lady who had been reared in the careful luxury of the old-fashioned Virginia home was invited to visit the kitchen of a great Chicago hotel. She wanted to go, but was afraid. When asked why, she replied, "I'm afraid I'll see something that will forever destroy my appetite for hotel food." She went, and found everything delightfully clean.

Good housewives consider cleanliness and purity first of all; that's why Quaker Oats is their choice among all oatmeal.

In making Quaker Oats the grain is sifted and re-sifted, passing through more than fifty processes of cleaning before it is cooked and rolled.

If you took a handful of oats and scrubbed and polished and wiped each separate grain, it wouldn't then be nearly as clean as Quaker Oats. No human hand ever touches a single grain of Quaker Oats from the field to your kitchen. The best advice on foods you could have is: Eat Quaker Oats every morning for breakfast.

This wonderful food is sold in three kinds of packages. The regular package at 10c. The large size family package at 25c. and the large size family package containing a fine piece of table china.

A laundress recently told the secret of her glossy, smooth-looking starch; when it came to a good boil she added a small piece of butter the size of a walnut. This not only gives a nice finish, makes ironing easier, but prevents the starch from boiling over.

A Glossy Starch.

Take one ounce of sperm-candle, one ounce of white wax, melt and run into a thin cake on a plate. A piece the size of a quarter of a dollar added to a quart of prepared starch will give a beautiful luster to the clothes and keep the frons from sticking.

Chicken Souffle.

For one pint of cold minced chicken allow one tablespoonful of butter, half a cup of dry bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, half a cup of water, whites of two eggs; quarter of a grated nutmeg, a pinch of sage and salt and pepper to taste. Heat the butter and add the bread crumbs; stir over a hot fire until the crumbs begin to brown, then remove from fire and add the water, then the minced chicken, the seasoning and last the eggs beaten to a froth; blend thoroughly, then put the mixture into a pan and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour; then pour over it a cream sauce, and serve.

Chicken souffles are delicious served cold with salad dressing.

Baltimore Whip.

Grate the rind of two lemons and squeeze out the juice; add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, one cup of pulverized sugar, whites of two eggs, and the yolks of four eggs. Beat for ten minutes. Dissolve two boxes of gelatin in a cup of warm water; when cool add to other ingredients drop by drop, then fold in the well-beaten whites of four eggs, beating constantly. Serve with orange juice, sweetened, and marshmallow sirup.

Devonshire Puffs.

This is an old-fashioned recipe that I always find popular. Peel and bake some apples, when cold mix the pulp, free from cores, with sufficient sugar to sweeten and a little grated lemon peel. Make some nice short crust, lay the prepared apple on a square of paste, and fold it over so as to form a three-cornered puff. Bake in a quick oven for 15 minutes. Sift white sugar over and serve.

Starch Puffs.

Take one ounce of sperm-candle, one ounce of white wax, melt and run into a thin cake on a plate. A piece the size of a quarter of a dollar added to a quart of prepared starch will give a beautiful luster to the clothes and keep the frons from sticking.

Hornless cattle have become quite common in town, but this is the first tailless calf that has appeared thus far. No great loss without some gain as it will be a great advantage to the person who milks, as they will be spared the blows from a very annoying member at the time.

FEEDLE OLD LADY

Has Strength Restored By

Viola

Mrs. Michael Bloom of Lawlertown, Pa., who is 80 years of age, says: "For a long time I have been so feeble that I have had to be wheeled around in an invalid's chair. I had no strength and took cold at the slightest provocation, which invariably settled on my lungs, and a cough would result. My son learned of the cod liver preparation called Viola, and procured a bottle for me. It built up my strength rapidly, and after taking three bottles I am able to do most of my work, and I can walk a quarter of a mile easily. Every aged or weak person who requires strength should try Viola. I am delighted with what it has done for me."

As a body builder and strength restorer for old people, delicate children, weak run-down persons, and after sickness, Viola is unequalled. It is sold to give satisfaction we will return your money.

FRAGMENTS OF LOCAL HISTORY.

er in open windows. Many of the spy ones even climbed nearby trees, where an unobstructed view could be obtained.

Through the inventive genius of Clinton Barker and others equally gifted,
a genuine log fort had been built in a catalpa forest of its growth and stump, making in all a most effective refuge for the residents of early settlements.

As a prearranged signal, the great pantomime opened. Those representing the settlers came from the log cabin, scattering to several sections of the clearing. Some wielded the heavy axe, others set to work tilling the soil with simple agricultural implements.
Some, however, were conscious of the large band of gaily attired Indians, silently watching from tree to tree,
these hideously painted faces peering
through the low branches, at their unsuspecting victims. With blood curdling yells that must have awakened the cave men of Stone Age, these Indians in their chosen disguise, rushed from their concealment, causing a general stampede for the fort. The unfortunate worker who failed to reach and find shelter behind its protective walls, was fall a victim to the savage onslaught.
The battle was now on. An attack would be made upon the block house, but the market place was through many tomahawks, seemingly hit the mark, causing the red skins to retreat in disorder. After several ineffectual attempts to close in and surround the brave defenders failed, one alert Indian gained the roof and quickly applied a fire brand. In five minutes the whole cabin was a roaring furnace and the defenders were forced to vacate.
A general massacre seemed certain, but that of course would have spoiled the whole day. A fitting alarm was introduced in this last chapter, which climaxed entire bloodshed.
A party of rangers heavily mounted appeared suddenly and the vindictive savages were driven from the Common.
This episode lasted fully two hours and the audience thousands certainly received satisfaction from this great entertainment, conducted in the midst of interested citizens. Only a few of the actors are now living in Bethel, but their clever performance still lingers in the memory of one at least who abso-luted every scene, while perched on the roof of a tall fence under a bell tree.

Our Common again figured prominently when Bethel's hospitality toward another enormous crowd to aid in properly observing Independence Day in 1892. After the customary parade, the large assembly gathered to the village square to witness a well prepared list of local events. A grand page illuminated in the center of the field had a lively chase in and out among the throng. Other popular contests were given, but climbing the greatest pole around the greatest sport for a spectator, but unpleasant conditions to those participating.

The following year entered unexpected changes in the physical features of our public ground. Now a party of village boys dare make a strenuous and dangerous journey into the marshy ground, the very heart of the Common, to see family with an alliance of those times. But we must leave the interesting story which relates the early change of many a new quiet and peaceful Bethel citizen. It was the night before July 4th, 1893 that a magnificent party gathered to take part in the celebration of the fourth of July. The place was decorated with flags and bunting and the atmosphere was festive.
The program was well planned and the entertainment was of the highest quality. The night was clear and the stars shined brightly in the sky. The celebration was a great success and the people were glad to participate in it.

players secured a clear field for their sports, and the village a more becoming and attractive central spot.

In 1894 the Democratic party successfully checked a long run of Republican rule. Consequently the victorious adherents celebrated this rare event and used the Common for their rendezvous. Bunting torches and other illuminations gave the square its first real-baptism from the politicians. Four years afterward, another sea of political flame surged over the surface, as an immense tidal wave. This time Republican contributions burned, blazing sky rockets, Roman candles and red fire lighted up the November darkness, proclaiming Benjamin Harrison president elect.

When Bethel observed the 100th anniversary of its incorporation, June 10, 1890, the committee wisely chose the new historic Common as an appropriate gathering place. Two stands were erected opposite the residence of Hon.
Josiah Foster, one being reserved for Chandler's Band of Portland, the other was used for the literary part of the festivities. Probably only a few in that large gathering fully realized the changed conditions from a century before. Hundreds strolling on Broad street or standing around the speakers'
platform were unconsciously enjoying blessings never once dreamed one hundred years before, when the same spot was an unbroken hill top, choked with forest vegetation and boulders. Probably Capt. Eleazar Twitchell with prophetic vision, scanned the eastern horizon, where a newer and grander civilization proclaimed its rising, thus anticipating a future generation's needs when he set apart this wooded spot in 1797.

Probably the last public assembly to be held on this historic site was in 1900
when more than five hundred Gould's Academy Alumni gathered to exchange familiar greetings or once more receive memories of the long ago. That day a huge tent erected near Prospect Hotel served a twofold purpose, namely a banquet hall and a public forum. Under this pavilion Gould's Academy received the spoken and more substantial pledges, which have borne such healthy fruit in the last few years, placing our well organized school on a basis second to none in Maine.

The year following, public spirited citizens commenced to realize their opportunity for still further perpetuating the memory of an early donor. A foundational basin was the first substantial addition, walks were improved and shrubbery planted. Thus Bethel can proudly boast of a genuine beauty spot, a well groomed historical site, literally the fulfillment of a vision announced to a broad minded pioneer nearly a century and a quarter ago.

SHOE FACTORY IN A RUM- FORD PROSPECT.

duty of the board of trade to take a hand in it.

L. W. Blanchard thought it best to get in touch with the firm and also find out what could be offered them in the way of power, location, etc.

P. H. Blanchard spoke of the necessity of having what can be offered in the way of power for new families to live in, and what the results would be. He thought that an important matter.

It is Gonyea said that towns that had built factories for those companies had not found it profitable, and cited the case of Bethel. Was not in favor of getting a company into town on any such plan. But was favorable to getting a company here that would build its own factory. Was willing to vote to accept such a concern from taxes for a term of years.

L. W. Green mentioned several places where towns had built factories for those firms, and that the empty factories left on hand at the end of a few years. Did not think it worth while to get a firm here on any such plan, and was fearful that this company might require some such thing to do this.

L. W. Blanchard made a motion that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to investigate the matter, and find out what the company wants and what can be offered them.

Before the motion was voted upon
L. W. Gonyea called upon M. A. Brigham to give the board an account of the arrangements made to get the W. L.
Bangs company to locate in Spring field.

NATIONAL BAZAAR.

Success, The One Word
Needed to Describe
This Event.

Good Cheer Society of South
Paris Holds Another Annual Fair and Entertainment

Despite handicaps which they have never before been obliged to face, the ladies of the Universalist Good Cheer Society of South Paris, made their annual fair, which was held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, as successful as any of their previous efforts, and all who are at all acquainted with what this bustling society has done, will realize that this is saying considerable.

It has been the custom for the decorating committee to begin their work Monday morning of the week of the fair, but this was made impossible this year by the order of the board of health that the hall must be cleaned and fumigated before the bazaar could be held. By bustling, this work was accomplished Monday, and no one will say that the hall did not need it and needed it badly, although the scarlet fever report proved to be false. This put the decorating committee just one day
behind in their work and made it impossible for them to do as elaborate a job as has sometimes been done.

Nevertheless, the national colors were used to good advantage and the decorations were simple but tasty. The different departments were about the same as usual and consisted of the following: Art, fancy, and useful apron, handkerchiefs and infant's wear,
underwear, leg cabin for the children,
candy, food and lunch, and doll's furnishings, all of which did a good business. The food and lunch table and the candy table disposed of their whole stock Wednesday afternoon and made a new supply for Thursday which was also sold to ready buyers.

When it came time to clear the hall
Thursday afternoon for the drama
there was very little stuff left to go over for another year. This is always one of the busiest times of the fair, as it is necessary to take down the decorations, remove everything, sweep and take away what rubbish has accumulated and get in place the settees and extra chairs needed to accommodate the large audience which always turns out for a home talent drama.

"The Penalty of Pride" the drama
given this year was much different from any play given here recently. It being a society drama with the scene laid among the wealthy people of New York City. Naturally it was lacking in the comedy element of the rural plays, which have been the style of dramas usually presented here, and was of a sadder tone, with many chances for good individual acting. The play, as a whole, took much better than those in charge of it expected that it would, many saying that the change to style was an agreeable one, and those to whom it did not appeal very strongly, criticized it only on the ground that they liked something with more fun in it. Three of the people in the cast, Mr. and Mrs. William Drecks and Miss Elvira Field, appeared in a drama before a South Paris audience for the first time, and all did fairly in their respective parts, showing that much strength has been added to our amateur talent by their assistance. Other engagements in the hall, made it necessary to produce the play with only two stage rehearsals and under these trying circumstances the performance was a very creditable one.

The cast of the play was as follows:
Frank Eastwick—Harold T. Thayer
Vivian Kirk—Albert D. Park
Robert Chalmers—Arthur H. Parker
(A back president, Mrs. Thayer's wife's name)

Tom Graham—William Brooks
(Directed to Bethel)
Vivian Kirk—Harold T. Thayer
(Not as bad after all)

Barber, a detective—A. L. Holmes
Daily Executive—Mrs. Wm. Brooks
(Frank Eastwick's wife)
Mollie Gage—Mrs. J. E. Andrews
(Mrs. Eastwick's sister)
Mrs. Dalmon—Mrs. J. J. Emery
(Whose baby is "reform")
Elizabeth Ann Gage—Marion Field
(Saved from the flames)

A pleasing specialty by Master Ralph Andrews and Miss Marie Newton was necessarily omitted because of Master Andrews' illness. Miss Newton giving one alone instead. One of the best things seen here for some time was the dance by little Miss Eva Andrews and it was hard to realize that so pretty a performance was the result of home training, rather than the work of a professional. Another dance was given by Misses Vera Howe and Ruth Gibson and was a pleasing feature.

The ladies were seated and then the music was voted upon and carried.
The program appeared on the commission, L. W. Blanchard, O. J. Gonyea and Thos. Farnham. The meeting was most harmoniously conducted.

METHODS OF STUDY DISCUSSED MONDAY

In Mexico By Supt. Rogers. A Lecture.

Full of Valuable Ideas for Teachers and Students.

Superintendent L. A. Rogers delivered a very helpful address Monday night to the school teachers and others gathered in the high school building in Mexico. The subject was "The Eclectic Tendency in Education."

He called attention to the fact that education was centered in the child, and cited Rousseau as the originator of the eclectic idea. The child must be sympathized with, and his education must come from within, rather than from without. The thought being that that which is within the child must form the basis of its education. This process of evolution must be made to play an important part in the child's education.

He brought to view the fact that the scientific tendency of the times begats
the idea of liberal education, and the eclectic influence creates the idea of culture and polish in education. The economic condition of the present time is responsible for the specialization of studies. This tendency has made a re-shaping of the ideas of education, as well as the methods of teaching, necessary.

The speaker dwelt at some length upon the conflict of ideas in the past regarding educative methods, and finally said, "What is aimed at in education,"
through a use of both interest and effort, is the production of a type of mind that includes power of rational insight, of deliberation, independence of judgment, firmness of decision, and effective action.

Mr. Rogers then discussed the relation of the individual to society and the difficulty of preserving the individuality of the man and at the same time solidifying society. He said it is the same problem that has been recognized from the beginning of life.

It is, he declared, "The problem of well being" and "well doing."

It is the old problem of relating the one to the many, of securing individual liberty and social justice.

The necessity of changing the methods of teaching from generation to generation is apparent, but the speaker thought the combination of all the different modes that have been employed in the times past, and all the theories should be made to blend and the best results obtained from them.

He closed an interesting lecture by speaking unfavorably of the competitive system. He thought the lowest rather than the highest standards were reached by that method of stimulating interest in studies.

A musical program enlivened the evening. Misses Stavert, Clark, Reynolds and Stubbs furnished that part of the evening's entertainment.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury.

Mercury will easily destroy the tissue of the organ and completely destroy the whole system
when entering it through the mucous surface.
Such ointments should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Remedy is manufactured by W. J. Carter, Jr., Tulsa, Ok., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In treating Catarrh of the prostate, urethra, bladder, etc., it is taken internally and is made in Tulsa, Okla.
by W. J. Carter & Co. (Tulsa, Okla.)

"Hall's Family Pills are the best."

Stearns' orchestra furnished excellent music the first two nights of the fair and an orchestra composed of Carl Briggs, violin; Howard Shaw, clarinet;
Ralph Penfold, cornet; Myron Watson, trombone; George Epper, drums, and Mr. Maude Davis, piano, gave much satisfaction Friday night.

The receipts amounted to about $180,
all of which was claimed from the sale
and the proceeds of the drama, there being no gaming or voting contests of any kind.
